

Jim Harbaugh

Bradford M. Freeman
Director of Football
Stanford University

When Stanford Athletic Director Bob Bowlsby went in search of a new football coach following the 2006 season, it didn't take long for Jim Harbaugh's name to move to the top of the list.

And on December 19, 2006, Bowlsby named Harbaugh, former NFL player and coach of the two-time NCAA Division I-AA national champions, as the Bradford M. Freeman Director of Football at Stanford University.

"I was very happy we were able to recruit Jim Harbaugh to come to Stanford University," said Bowlsby, The Jaquish & Kenninger Director of Athletics at Stanford. "I think he is an extraordinary fit at our University. He certainly values the convergence of world-class athletics and world-class academics, and I think he will do an extraordinary job of representing our University as the head football coach in the years ahead."

Harbaugh has spent the last three seasons (2004-06) as the head coach at the University of San Diego, leading the Toreros to Division I-AA Mid-Major national titles each of the past two campaigns. He posted an impressive three-year overall record of 29-6 (.829) at San Diego, including 11-1 campaigns each of the past two years that also included a school record 18-game win streak over the period and two Pioneer Football League championships.

"It is a pleasure, privilege, honor and blessing to be Stanford University's head football coach", said Harbaugh. "Now, I dedicate my life's work to building the foundation at Stanford University, the foundation that will lead to great success down the road as well as continue the tradition and restore the legacy that Stanford rightfully has in college football."

Both as a player – in high school, college and in the NFL – and as a coach, Harbaugh has enjoyed success every step of the way.

Harbaugh starred at Palo Alto High School as one of the top prep quarterbacks in the nation, then enjoyed a storied career at the University of Michigan, leading the Wolverines to three bowl games while being named Big Ten Player of the Year. As a professional player, Harbaugh finished his career among the NFL's Top 50 all-time in several passing categories and was named AFC Offensive Player of the Year. In his brief coaching career, he has been a part of one Super Bowl team with the Oakland Raiders and guided his USD teams to two national championships.

Harbaugh played for five teams over 15 seasons (1987-2001) as a quarterback in the National Football League after entering the NFL as a first round draft pick of the Chicago Bears in 1987. After seven seasons in Chicago (1987-93), Harbaugh played for the Indianapolis Colts for four years (1994-97), one year with the Baltimore Ravens (1998), two seasons with the San Diego Chargers (1999-2000) and his final season with the Carolina Panthers (2001).

While in Chicago, Harbaugh passed for over 2000 yards in four consecutive seasons and was the starting quarterback for some of the Bears' best teams. He led Chicago to back-to-back 11-5 seasons in 1990 and '91. He had his most statistically successful NFL season in 1991 when he passed for a career-best 3121 yards and took Chicago to an NFC Wild Card game. He also led the Bears to an NFC Division playoff contest after winning an NFC Wild Card game in 1990.

Harbaugh made a significant contribution to the Indianapolis Colts during his four seasons. In 1995, Harbaugh led Indianapolis to the AFC Championship game while earning AFC Offensive Player of the Year and NFL Co-Comeback Player of the Year honors during a Pro Bowl campaign. He was also the runner-up for the NFL's Most Valuable Player honor in 1995 and the league's top-rated passer. He threw for 2630 yards in 1996 and guided the Colts to the playoffs for the second straight season. In January of 2005, Harbaugh was named to the Colts' Ring of Honor as one of the top players in franchise history.

Harbaugh played his final five seasons for three different teams. In 1999, he passed for 2761 yards, the second highest single season total of his career, while starting for the San Diego Chargers.

Throughout his career, he passed for 26288 yards and 129 touchdowns and through the 2006 season, he ranks among the NFL's all-time Top 50 in career completions (#35, 2305), pass attempts (#39, 3918) and passing yards (#48, 26,288).

Following his retirement from pro football, Harbaugh went into the coaching ranks and spent two seasons (2002-03) as the quarterbacks coach for the Oakland Raiders. In his first season, the Raiders finished 11-5 during the regular season and won the AFC Western Division. They went on to beat the New York Jets and Tennessee Titans to advance to Super Bowl XXXVII in San Diego, where they lost to Tampa Bay.

Harbaugh began his coaching career while still playing in the NFL as an NCAA-certified unpaid assistant coach under his father, Jack, at Western Kentucky University for eight seasons from 1994-2001. Serving as an offensive consultant, Jim scouted and recruited high school student-athletes throughout several states including Florida, Indiana and Illinois. He was involved in recruiting 17 players on WKU's 2002 Division I-AA National Championship team.

He played collegiate football at the University of Michigan and led the Wolverines to three bowl games as a starting quarterback from 1984-86. As a senior in 1986, he guided Michigan to an appearance in the Rose Bowl while earning All-American and Big Ten Player of the Year honors, and finishing third in the Heisman Trophy balloting. His 1985 Wolverine team added a Fiesta Bowl victory and ended the season ranked second in the national polls. He quarterbacked Michigan to a 21-3-1 overall record while starting all 25 contests in his final two collegiate campaigns.

Harbaugh has local ties to Stanford with his father spending two seasons (1980-81) as the school's defensive coordinator and Jim playing two years of prep football at nearby Palo Alto High School before graduating in 1982.

Harbaugh is also co-owner of Panther Racing in the Indy Racing League. His team won the 2001 and 2002 IRL championships. In addition, he has been very active in community service ventures including the Harbaugh Hill Foundation, the James Whitcomb Riley Hospital for Children (Indiana University), Western Kentucky University, the Jim Harbaugh Foundation, the Uhlich Children's Home and the Children's Miracle Network.

Harbaugh's dad, Jack, was a football coach for 41 years, including 14 seasons as the head coach at Western Kentucky. His brother, John, is currently the special teams coordinator for the Philadelphia Eagles and entering his 10th year with the organization in 2007; and his brother-in-law, Tom Crean, just finished his eighth campaign as the men's basketball head coach at Marquette University in 2006-07.

Harbaugh has three children: sons Jay (born June 14, 1989) and James, Jr. (born September 4, 1996), and daughter Grace (born June 27, 2000). Harbaugh is engaged to Sarah Feuerborn of Kansas City, Missouri.

Lance Anderson

Defensive Tackles/Recruiting Coordinator

One of three members of the current Cardinal staff who coached with Jim Harbaugh at the University of San Diego, Lance Anderson became Stanford's defensive tackles coach and recruiting coordinator on January 10, 2007.

While at USD the past two seasons (2005-06), Anderson coached the defensive line and was the Toreros' recruiting coordinator and a major contributor to USD finishing 11-1 each season and winning back-to-back NCAA Division I-AA Mid-Major national championships.

Prior to joining Harbaugh in San Diego, Anderson had coached at Utah State, Saint Mary's (CA), Bucknell and Idaho State.

Anderson coached outside linebackers in 2004 at Utah State and assisted with all special teams. The Aggies were first in the nation in punt returns, 21st in kickoff returns and 28th in net punting.

Anderson spent the 2003 season in the Bay Area as the co-defensive coordinator and defensive line coach at Saint Mary's College in Moraga, California. Under his guidance, the Gaels had four defensive players chosen to the I-AA Independent All-Star team while one of those players was selected to play in the East-West Shrine Game. Safety Weston Borba was a First Team I-AA selection, linebackers Ray Mike and Heath Villarreal were Second Team picks while linebacker Anthony Woodards earned honorable mention recognition.

His longest coaching stint was at Bucknell, where he coached for four years (1999-2002). Anderson coached the defensive line and was the recruiting coordinator in 2001 and '02 after coaching tight ends and assisting on the offensive line in 1999 and 2000. One of his players was a two-time First Team I-AA All-America defensive lineman while five of Anderson's pupils received all-league recognition. Bucknell's defense led the Patriot League in total defense in 2001 and '02 and finished fifth nationally in total defense in '01.

In 1999, Anderson coached running backs for one season for the Mobile Admirals of the Regional Football League. His team won the league championship while one of his players led the league in rushing and was named league MVP, and another was an all-league tight end.

A native of Rupert, Idaho, Anderson began his coaching career at his alma mater, Idaho State, in 1997. He spent two seasons with the Bengals (1997-98), the first as running backs coach and the second as assistant offensive line and tight ends coach.

Anderson played football, basketball and track at Minico High School in Idaho before walking on to the football team at Brigham Young in 1989. After serving an LDS mission in Phoenix, Ariz., Anderson walked on at Idaho State where he played linebacker in 1993 and '94. He earned a Bachelors degree in biology from Idaho State in 1996 and is currently working on a Masters in education at Bucknell.

Anderson and his wife, Sherri, have three children: Aubrey, Jaren and Braden.

Andy Buh

Linebackers

Andy Buh was named to Jim Harbaugh's staff at Stanford on January 10, 2007, as the Cardinal's linebackers coach. Buh, pronounced "BOO," most recently coached at Fresno State and San Diego State He has also coached at California and Nevada during his collegiate coaching career.

A 1996 graduate of the University of Nevada, Buh was a graduate assistant coach last year at Fresno State. He assisted with the linebackers and special teams for the Bulldogs' staff while also running the scout team.

For four seasons prior to moving to Fresno, Buh was the linebackers coach at San Diego State from 2002-05. He helped the Aztecs put together a defensive unit in 2003 that ranked eighth in total defense nationally. One of Buh's pupils, Kirk Morrison, was twice named the Mountain West Conference Defensive Player of the Year. Under his tutelage in 2005, two SDSU linebackers were on the national watch lists for the Nagurski and Butkus Awards and both have gone on to NFL careers.

Buh twice coached players at San Diego State that led the Mountain West Conference in tackles: Matt McCoy in 2003 and Freddie Keiaho in 2005. Four of Buh's former players are currently playing in the NFL, including McCoy, who was a second round draft pick, Morrison and Keiaho, both third round selections, and Heath Farwell, who signed as a free agent.

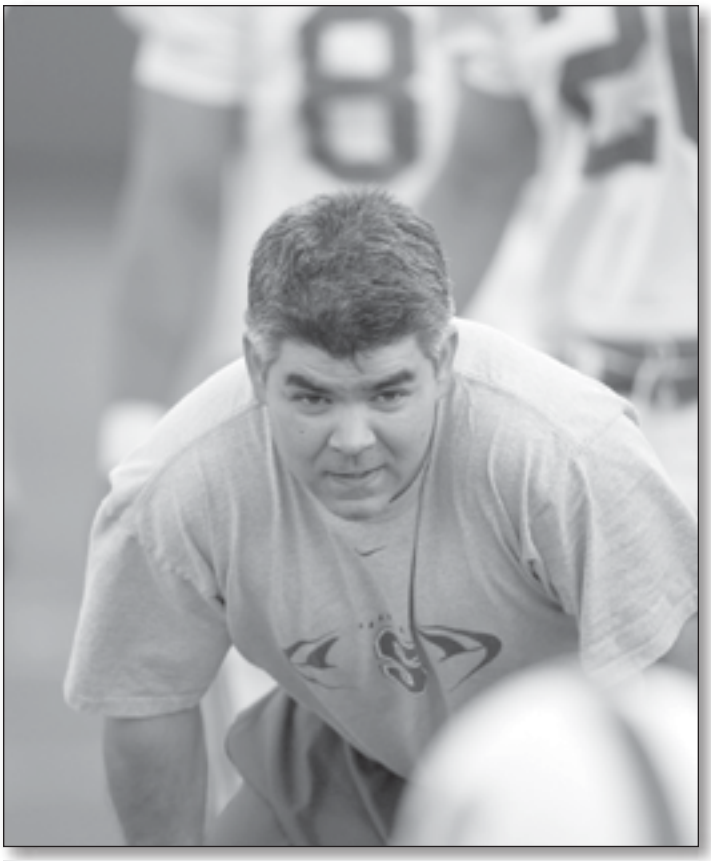

Buh spent two seasons (2000-01) in Berkeley as a defensive administrative assistant for the Bears where he worked with the defensive coordinator and linebackers.

After concluding his playing days at the University of Nevada in 1994, Buh returned to his alma mater in 1997 as a graduate assistant coach for the next two years. During this time, Buh coached the secondary and assisted with all special teams. He left Reno following the 1998 season only to return a few months later.

Buh was at Saint Mary's College in Moraga during the spring of 1999 as the Gaels' secondary coach, but he returned to Nevada prior to the 1999 season to coach the Wolfpack secondary and assist with special teams. Buh's first coaching assignment was his prep alma mater, Orange Glen High School, in 1996.

Buh was a two-year varsity letterwinner at Nevada, where he played linebacker under head coach Chris Ault. Buh played at Palomar College from 1991-92 before transferring to Nevada. During his community college stint, Buh helped the Comets to a 20-2 overall record and a national championship in 1991. He was also named an All-American in his final season.

Born June 20, 1973, Buh earned his Bachelors degree in physical education from Nevada in 1996. A native of Escondido, Calif., Buh graduated from Orange Glen High School. He is married to the former Kelly Morris.

Chris Dalman

Offensive Line

Chris Dalman, a four-year letterwinner at Stanford and seven-year NFL veteran with the San Francisco 49ers, will be in his first season as the offensive line coach at Stanford in 2007. He will be responsible for developing a young offensive line that returns just two full-time starters and one part-time starter from last season's club.

Dalman has spent the last two seasons (2005-06) as the assistant offensive line coach for an Atlanta Falcons' team that was on the verge of making the playoffs in both seasons. The Falcons' offensive line has been responsible for creating running room for Warrick Dunn, who has combined to rush for 2566 yards over the last two seasons with 1000-yard rushing seasons during both campaigns Dalman was with the club.

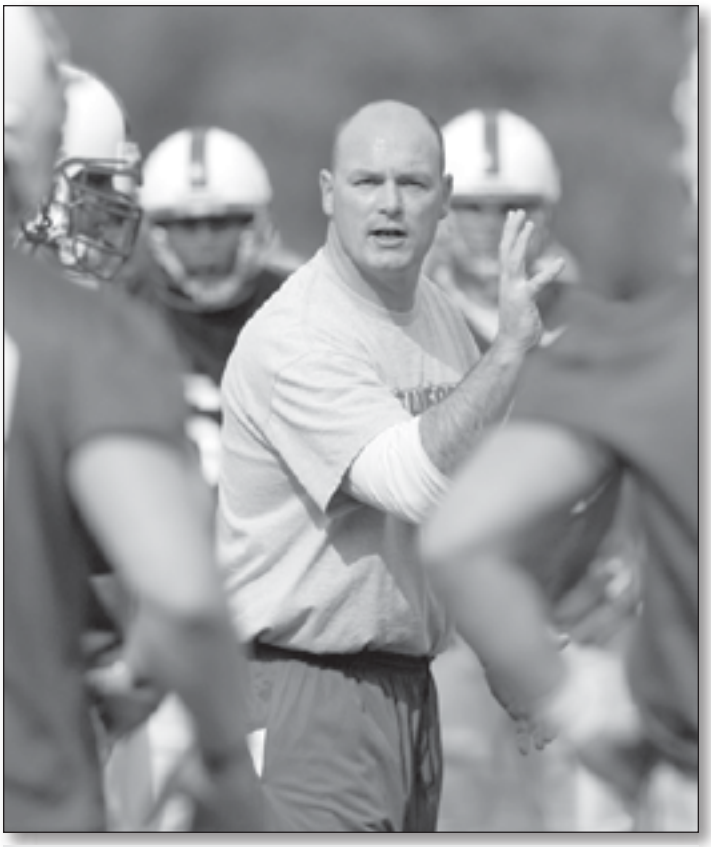

Dalman was an English teacher at Palma High School in Salinas, California, and coached football from 2001-04 at the school before joining the Falcons.

He was a four-year starter for Stanford and a member of two bowl teams during his collegiate playing days. Dalman was a junior on Stanford's 1991 Aloha Bowl squad coached by Denny Green that finished the season with an 8-4 mark and was the third-highest scoring team in school history. As a fifth-year senior on the Cardinal's 1992 team coached by Bill Walsh, he helped lead the squad to a 10-3 record and a victory over Penn State in the Blockbuster Bowl. Dalman started 33 games for the Cardinal and was named Second Team All-Pac-10 in 1992. He played in both the East-West Shrine Game and the Hula Bowl in January of 1993 following his collegiate career.

A sixth round draft choice by San Francisco in 1993, Dalman spent his entire NFL playing career from 1993-99 with the 49ers before suffering a career-ending injury during the 2000 training camp. He played in 107 games and started 64 at center and guard. Dalman captured one Super Bowl ring following the 1994 season in Super Bowl XXIX when San Francisco defeated the San Diego Chargers and played in three NFC championship games. San Francisco had winning seasons in each of his first six campaigns with the club and had a 74-38 overall regular season record during the seven years in which he played.

Dalman received his Bachelors degree in Political Science from Stanford in 1992. He grew up in Salinas and attended Palma High School, where he graduated from in 1988.

Dalman and wife, Yanne, have two children, Kate and Drew.

Tim Drevno

Tight Ends

Tim Drevno is in his first season as the tight ends coach at Stanford in 2007 and his 15th as a collegiate coach. He will inherit a tight end group that was used sparingly in the passing game last year with Jim Dray the only returnee to have caught a ball in 2006.

Drevno came to Stanford along with first-year head football coach Jim Harbaugh from the University of San Diego, where he spent the last four seasons (2003-06) as the offensive coordinator and offensive line coach. The Toreros won NCAA Division I-AA Mid-Major national titles (Sports Network Cup) and Pioneer League championships in each of his last two campaigns.

The four Torero teams Tim coached offensive football for enjoyed a tremendous amount of success, ranking as the nation's top offense twice as well as third once and ninth on the other occasion.

The 2006 squad that finished 11-1 overall led all NCAA Division I-AA teams in passing offense (293.3 ypg), total offense (494.25 ypg) and scoring offense (42.83 ppg). Quarterback Josh Johnson was one of four offensive All-Americans on the team and led all NCAA Division I-AA quarterbacks in passing efficiency (169.0 quarterback rating), touchdown passes (34, co-leader), points responsible for (24.33 ppg) and total offense (336.7 ypg), throwing for 3320 yards to also lead the country and running for another 721. He added 11 rushing touchdowns and even caught one TD pass.

San Diego set numerous offense school records in 2005, including a 42.6 points per game average and 485.2 yards of total offense per game that were both eclipsed the following season.

In 2004, the Torero offense averaged 432.4 yards of total offense per game to rank ninth in the nation. The Toreros were also 11th in scoring offense (36.1 ppg) and 12th in passing offense (275.4 ypg).

He directed USD's West Coast offense to 483.3 yards per game to lead the nation and a Pioneer Football League best 39.9 points per game in 2003 when the squad finished 8-2 and was co-champs of the Pioneer Football League's North Division.

Drevno was the offensive line coach at Idaho for three seasons (2000-02) prior to joining the USD staff. The Vandal offense ranked sixth in the nation in 2001 and eighth in 2000. He coached a pair of current NFL players while at Idaho in Jake Scott and Rick Demulling. Scott, a fifth round pick of Indianapolis in 2004, has started all 16 regular season games with the Colts each of the past two seasons (2005-06) and was in the lineup as a starter in the squad's Super Bowl XLI victory over the Chicago Bears on February 4, 2007. DeMulling was also drafted by Indianapolis in the seventh round of the 2001 NFL Draft and played four seasons with the Colts (2001-04) before spending the last two campaigns (2005-06) with the Detroit Lions.

Prior to his tenure at Idaho, Drevno's previous coaching stops included San Jose State as the offensive line coach (1999), UNLV (1998) as the running backs coach and Montana State (1993-98), where he coaching the tight ends for three seasons (1993-95) before going from 1996 through the spring of 1998 as the running backs coach. He started his coaching career with two seasons at Cal State Fullerton as a graduate assistant (1991-92).

D.J. Durkin

Defensive Ends/Special Teams

D.J. Durkin, who coached at Bowling Green the past two seasons, was named to Jim Harbaugh's staff on February 1, 2007. Durkin will coach the defensive ends and Stanford's special teams.

A native of Youngstown, Ohio, Durkin coached defensive ends for Bowling Green in 2005, then moved over to coach the linebackers and become the Falcons' special teams coordinator in 2006.

Durkin, a 2001 graduate of Bowling Green, began his coaching career with the Falcons as a graduate assistant in 2001 and '02. He then spent two seasons at Notre Dame (2003, '04) as a graduate assistant before returning to his alma mater in 2005.

While at Notre Dame, Durkin assisted the staff in all aspects on defense with particular emphasis on working with the defensive ends, where he coached the school's all-time sack leader Justin Tuck in 2004. Durkin was also part of the Irish staff that led Notre Dame to the 2004 Insight.com Bowl.

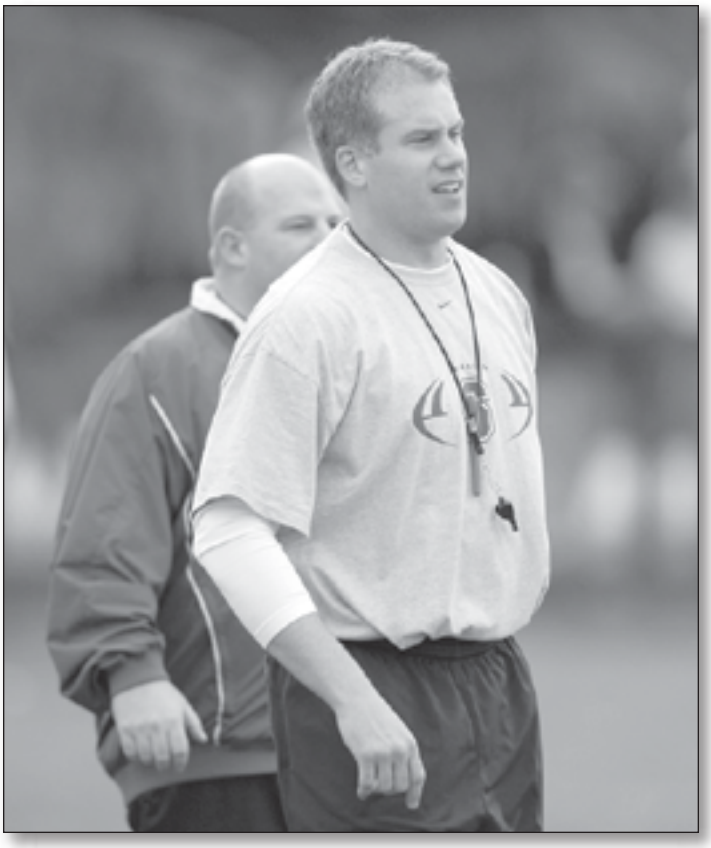

Following his playing career, Durkin was a graduate assistant at Bowling Green during the 2001 and '02 seasons coaching the defensive ends. In 2002, the Falcons were 9-3 and ranked in the Top 20 of both major polls. In 2001, the Bowling Green defense was first in the Mid-American Conference in total defense, as well as four other major defensive categories.

A four-year starter at defensive end and outside linebacker for the Falcons as a player from 1997-2000, he was elected a two-year captain by his teammates. He started 33 games in his career and recorded 131 tackles, including 28 for loss. He led the team in sacks in 1998 and finished second on the squad in that category in 2000. He also received a number of awards during his career including the Ken Schoeni Award for character and toughness, the Carlos Jackson Award for personifying the values of a true student-athlete and the Leadership Award for displaying great leadership.

He earned a Bachelors degree in business marketing from Bowling Green in 2001 and a Masters degree in educational administration and supervision in May of 2004.

Durkin played three seasons at Boardman High School where he was an All-Conference and All-Northeast Ohio selection.

Durkin is married to the former Sarah Brumback.

Scott Shafer

Defensive Coordinator/
Assistant Head Coach

One of the top young defensive coaches in college football, Scott Shafer joined the Cardinal staff on February 13, 2007, as assistant head coach and defensive coordinator.

Shafer spent the past two years as the defensive coordinator at Western Michigan, where he led a defensive unit that ranked among the best in the nation. Shafer, a 1990 graduate of Baldwin-Wallace, was the defensive coordinator while also coaching defensive backs at Western Michigan in 2005 and '06.

During his career, he has also coached at Indiana, Rhode Island, Northern Illinois and Illinois.

For the past two years, he helped the Broncos register the biggest turnaround in MAC history. Western Michigan was 1-10 the year before he arrived, then went 7-4 in 2005 and 8-5 in 2006. Shafer's defensive unit was a large part of WMU's success.

In 2006, Shafer spearheaded a defensive group that ranked first in the nation in interceptions (24) and sacks (46), sixth in run defense, seventh in turnover margin and 11th in total defense. His defense included linebacker Ameer Ismail, the MAC Defensive Player of the Year and a Second Team All-American, and All-MAC defensive back London Fryar.

The Broncos' rush defense (76.1 ypg) in 2006 set a MAC record for fewest rushing yards allowed per game. Shafer was a nominee for the Broyles Award as the top assistant coach in the nation.

In his first season, Shafer's defense was a major reason why the Broncos were able to turn a 1-10 team into a 7-4 club. His defense, led by All-MAC defensive back Louis Delmas, recorded 13 forced fumbles and 15 interceptions.

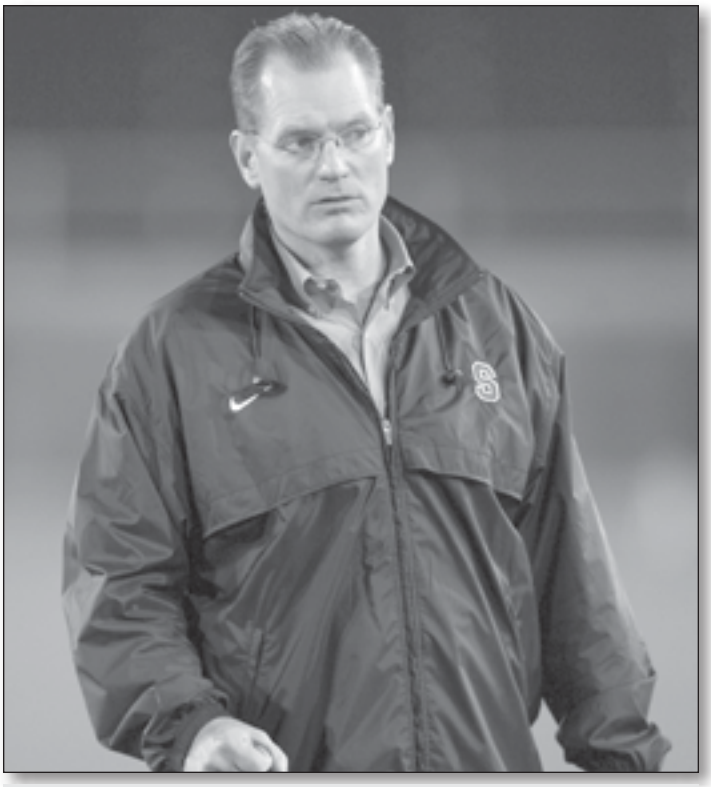

Shafer was the secondary coach at Illinois in 2004 under head coach Ron Turner prior to moving to Western Michigan. While in Champaign, he coached cornerback Kelvin Hayden, who led the Big Ten in interceptions and was drafted in the second round.

Shafer coached at Northern Illinois for eight seasons (1996-2003), including the last four as defensive coordinator. He was also the defensive backs coach during his entire tenure in DeKalb, Ill. As defensive coordinator, Shafer's unit was a driving force in the Huskies going 30-16 and winning two MAC West Division championships (2001, '02) from 2000-03.

Throughout his career at NIU, Shafer's players earned 13 All-MAC selections. During the 2003 season, Northern Illinois was ranked as high as No. 12 in the AP poll, recorded its first 10-win season in 20 years, and had three victories over BCS teams while holding them to an average of 15 points per game.

NIU also led the nation in interceptions with 23 in 2003 and had five defensive players named to the All-MAC team. In 2002, Shafer's defense led the conference in interceptions, takeaways, sacks, scoring defense and run defense.

He began his coaching career as a graduate assistant at Indiana under head coach Bill Mallory in 1991 and '92. He spent the next three seasons (1993-95) as the defensive backs coach at Rhode Island.

David Shaw

Offensive Coordinator/Wide Receivers

David Shaw returns to Stanford as the offensive coordinator/wide receivers coach in 2007. He will be in charge of a veteran offense that has its top 11 receivers returning from last year's club, including fifth-year seniors Mark Bradford and Evan Moore as well as 2006 Pac-10 All-Freshman player Richard Sherman. The Cardinal offense will also return quarterback T.C. Ostrander, who started the team's final five games last season.

Shaw came to Stanford along with first-year head coach Jim Harbaugh from the University of San Diego, where he spent the 2006 season coaching the nation's top-ranked Division I-AA offense as the passing game coordinator and wide receivers coach for a Torero team that won the NCAA Division I-AA Mid-Major national title and Pioneer League championship.

The 2006 squad that finished 11-1 overall led all NCAA Division I-AA teams in passing offense (293.3 ypg), total offense (494.25 ypg) and scoring offense (42.83 ppg). Quarterback Josh Johnson was one of four offensive All-Americans on the team and led all NCAA Division I-AA quarterbacks in passing efficiency (169.0 quarterback rating), touchdown passes (34, co-leader), points responsible for (24.33 ppg) and total offense (336.7 ypg), throwing for 3320 yards to also lead the country and running for another 721. He added 11 rushing touchdowns and even caught one TD pass.

Shaw had coached the previous nine seasons in the National Football League with the Philadelphia Eagles (1997), Oakland Raiders (1998-2001) and Baltimore Ravens (2002-05).

Shaw's most recent coaching job in the NFL with Baltimore spanned 2002-05. He was both a quarterbacks and wide receivers coach from 2002-04 before working solely with the wide receivers in 2005. His tenure included a 2003 campaign that reaped an AFC North title and a 10-6 regular season record. Derrick Mason set a new franchise record with 86 receptions under Shaw's tutelage in 2005 when he also posted the third-biggest season in terms of receiving yards with 1073. Mark Clayton set a franchise rookie record for receptions in 2005 when he caught 44 balls for 471 yards.

After three seasons of quality control with the Oakland Raiders from 1998-2000, Shaw moved into the role of quarterbacks coach in 2001 as the Raiders won a second straight AFC West title and finished the regular season with a 10-6 mark. Quarterback Rich Gannon made the NFL Pro Bowl for the second straight season and ended up as the game's MVP. Gannon had the third-most prolific campaign of his 16-year pro career during the 2001 regular season, throwing for 3828 yards on 361-of-549 passing (65.8%).

Shaw got his start in the NFL in quality control with the Philadelphia Eagles in 1997.

His first two seasons of coaching came in the collegiate ranks at Western Washington, where he coached the outside linebackers in 1995 and the tight ends in 1996.

His father, Willie, was an assistant coach at Stanford from 1974-76 and again from 1989-91. He coached for a total of 33 seasons, including 15 in the NFL with the Detroit Lions, Kansas City Chiefs, Minnesota Vikings, New Orleans Saints, Oakland Raiders, San Diego Chargers and St. Louis Rams.

The Shaw File

Full Name: David Shaw

Hometown: Union City, California
High School: James Logan
College: Stanford, 1995 (B.A., Sociology)
Wife: Kori
Children: Keegan, Carter
Playing Experience: FL, Stanford (1991-94)

Shaw was a four-year letterwinner (1991-94) at Stanford as a receiver. He was a member of Stanford's 1991 Aloha Bowl team coached by Dennis Green that finished the season with an 8-4 mark and was the third-highest scoring team in school history. He was also on the Cardinal's 1992 Blockbuster Bowl winning squad coached by Bill Walsh that had a 10-3 overall mark. Shaw finished his Stanford career with 57 catches for 664 yards and five touchdowns. Shaw also competed in a varsity track meet and a varsity basketball game while at Stanford. He graduated from Stanford in 1995 with a Bachelors degree in Sociology.

David was also a three-sport athlete as a prep at James Logan High School in Union City, California.

David and his wife, Kori, have two children, Carter and Keegan.

Willie Taggart

Running Backs

Willie Taggart will be in his first season as the running backs coach at Stanford in 2007. He has the team's top two rushers from last season in Anthony Kimble and Toby Gerhart among the returnees to work with.

Taggart has spent the past eight seasons on the Western Kentucky coaching staff (1999-2006), helping guide the Hilltoppers to eight consecutive winning campaigns during the stretch. He worked with first-year Stanford head coach Jim Harbaugh in his first three seasons of coaching from 1999-2001. Taggart started his coaching career as Western Kentucky's wide receivers coach in 1999 before working with the quarterbacks from 2000-06. He was also the co-offensive coordinator in 2001 and '02, helping lead the Hilltoppers to the Division I-AA national championship in '02, and was promoted to assistant head coach in 2003.

Under Taggart's guidance, quarterback Justin Haddix set school career records with 8890 yards of total offense, a 57.1 completion percentage, 50 touchdowns and a 137.28 pass efficiency rating. Haddix also ranks second all-time on the Hill with 541 completions and 7929 yards passing. As a senior, Haddix earned All-Gateway Football Conference honorable mention recognition for the second year in a row after completing a career-high 171 of his 279 passes for 2186 yards – the third-highest single-season total in school history – and 14 touchdowns. He ranked second in the league in passing average, third in total offense and fifth in passing efficiency. Haddix was also a Second Team All-GFC selection in 2004 while picking up the league's Freshman of the Year award in 2003.

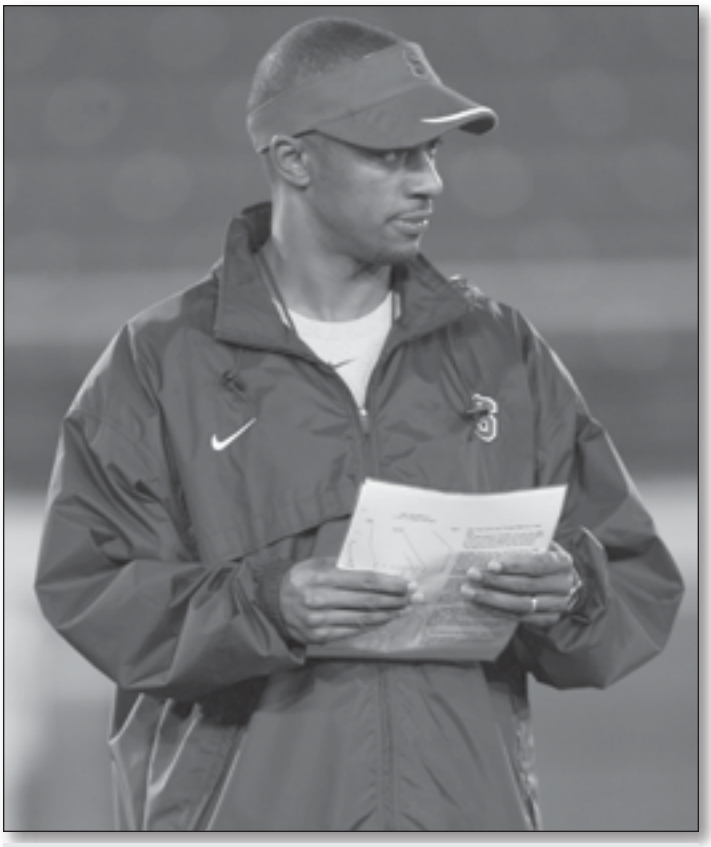

Taggart helped coach an offensive unit that set school records for points (432), total yards (5479) and first downs (263) en route to the 2002 NCAA Division I-AA national championship. The Hilltoppers ranked second in the nation in pass efficiency and sixth in rushing, and averaged 38.8 points per contest in four playoff victories.

In Taggart's first year calling plays in 2000, WKU ran for 293.4 yards per contest, leading the Gateway Football Conference and ranking second in the country in the category. The Toppers averaged 33.0 points per game and led the Ohio Valley Conference in rushing for the second straight year as WKU claimed the league title and advanced to the quarterfinals of the I-AA playoffs. In his first season in 1999, WKU ranked eighth in the nation and first in the conference in rushing.

Taggart's efforts helped WKU quarterbacks earn honorable mention all-conference accolades in three consecutive seasons – Jason Johnson (2000), Donte Pimpleton (2001) and Jason Michael (2002).

Taggart also spent his collegiate playing days at Western Kentucky, where he became the top rushing quarterback in Division I-AA history with 3997 yards (he is still second all-time among quarterbacks) at the end of his career, which is also a WKU standard for all runners. In addition, he remains the all-time leading scorer at Western Kentucky with 280 points.

He was a finalist for the prestigious Walter Payton Award in each of his last two seasons for an honor given annually to the top offensive player in I-AA football, finishing fourth in the balloting in 1997 and seventh as a senior the following year. An All-American as a senior, he was also the 1998 I-AA Independents' Offensive Player of the Year. Taggart was recruited to WKU by Jim Harbaugh to play for his father, Jack.

The Taggart File

Full Name: Willie Taggart
Date of Birth: August 27, 1976

High School: Manatee
College: Western Kentucky, 1998 (B.A., Social Science)
Wife: Taneshia
Children: Willie, Jr., Jackson
Playing Experience: QB, Western Kentucky (1994-98)

He was only the third WKU athlete in the past half-century to hold down the quarterback slot for the Hilltoppers four straight years. Taggart – who holds 11 WKU school records for rushing and scoring – had his jersey retired on October 23, 1999.

Taggart graduated from Western Kentucky with a Bachelors degree in Social Sciences in 1998.

As a prep standout at Manatee High School, he was a First Team All-State and All-Conference selection as a senior after guiding the Hurricanes to the state 5A Championship game. He led MHS to the state title his junior season and helped the school post a 26-4 record during that two-year span while recording more than 3000 yards passing and 975 yards on the ground.

Willie and his wife Taneshia have two children, Willie, Jr. and Jackson.

Clayton White

Defensive Backs

Former NFL player Clayton White was named Stanford's defensive backs coach on February 21, 2007. White, a graduate of North Carolina State, coached the secondary at Western Michigan in 2006 under new Cardinal defensive coordinator Scott Shafer.

White was a three-year starter at North Carolina State and played three years in the National Football League before joining the coaching ranks. He coached two seasons at Western Carolina (2004-05) as the defensive backs coach and special teams assistant.

While at Western Michigan, White was part of a Broncos staff that led the team to an 8-5 record in 2006 and an appearance in the 2007 International Bowl played in Toronto. He coached a defense that led the nation with 24 interceptions and 3.54 sacks per game, while ranking tied for second with 37 turnovers gained, tied for sixth in yards rushing yards allowed per game (76.1) and seventh in turnover margin (+0.92). White was part of the WMU defense that set a MAC record for fewest rushing yards allowed per game.

He spent the previous two seasons (2004-05) at Western Carolina where he coached the defensive backs, was a special teams assistant and recruiting coordinator. The Catamounts led the nation in pass defense, ranked fifth in passing efficiency defense and 18th in overall defense in 2005. He also coached a pair of defensive backs (Francis Brown and Primus Glover) to First Team All-SOCON honors.

White's special teams unit ranked third in the SOCON in yards per punt return (9.84 ypr) in 2004, while Western Carolina recorded two blocked kicks that were returned for touchdowns in 2005. White also served as the football program's recruiting coordinator during his two seasons.

A native of Dunn, North Carolina, White was a member of the Tampa Bay Buccaneers from March to August of 2003 as a linebacker and special teams player. He spent two seasons (2001-02) with the New York Giants, also as a linebacker and a member of the special teams unit. White played every special teams snap during the 2001 season and made seven tackles for the Giants.

White was a three-year starter at linebacker from 1999-2001 and a member of the special teams unit during his collegiate playing days with North Carolina State. A captain as a senior, White's name still appears in the Wolfpack record book in several categories. At the end of the 2006 season, White ranked 10th all-time at North Carolina State in career tackles for loss with 33 stops behind the line of scrimmage for 107 yards, seventh in tackles for loss in a season (16 in 1998), sixth in single-game history with 23 tackles versus Ohio and 10th in the same category with 20 tackles in a game against Texas. He was also named N.C. State's Special Teams MVP in 1997.

White received his Bachelors of science degree from the school in parks, recreation and tourism with a concentration in sports management in 2001.

Shannon Turley

Strength and Conditioning Coach

Shannon Turley is in his first season as the strength and conditioning coach for Stanford Football in 2007. Turley spent the 2006 campaign at San Diego with current Stanford head coach Jim Harbaugh as the Director of Athletic Performance, where he led a comprehensive injury prevention and athletic performance enhancement training program for all of the Toreros' 16-sport programs.

Turley served at Missouri (2001-05) for the five previous years, the first two as a graduate assistant while earning his Masters degree in Education and Counseling Psychology with a concentration in Sports Psychology in 2003, then the final three as assistant director of strength and conditioning. During his tenure at Mizzou, he assisted with the player development program for the football team as well as directed the training of the women's volleyball and wrestling programs. In addition to his coaching duties, Turley directed the annual Mizzou Athletic Performance Development Clinic, and was responsible for supervising the professional development of three graduate assistant coaches and four undergraduate intern coaches. Turley also developed and directed a comprehensive sports nutrition program for 20 varsity teams that included negotiating sponsorships with Kraft Foods and Gatorade, while managing the department's budget for the purchase of nutritional supplements.

Prior to his stint with the Tigers, Turley served the Kansas City Royals Baseball Club during the 2001 season when he was directly responsible for the strength and conditioning development of the Double-A affiliate Wichita Wranglers.

A Virginia Tech alumnus, Turley earned a Bachelors degree in the Science of Human Nutrition, Foods and Exercise in addition to a minor in Chemistry in 2000. While with the Hokies, Turley served as President of the Exercise Science Student Organization and began his career in strength and conditioning as a student assistant coach following his track and field career.

He is a certified member of the Collegiate Strength and Conditioning Coaches Association and the National Strength and Conditioning Association, as well as a certified sports nutritionist with the International Society of Sports Nutrition.

Matt Doyle

Assistant Athletic Director
Director of Football Operations

Matt Doyle is entering his eighth year with the Stanford Football program and first as Assistant Athletic Director and Director of Football Operations. Doyle, who came to Stanford in July of 2000, has worked as the Associate Director of Football Operations the past four years.

In his current role, he is responsible for the day-to-day-operations of the football program which include coordinating team travel, the Cardinal Community Outreach programs, The Jim Harbaugh Football Camps, the annual Stanford Football High School coaching clinic and passing tournament, the "12th Man" Summer Jobs program, and other team events and projects. He also works closely with the University Faculty and Staff, and the Athletic Department's marketing, media relations and development offices.

The Cardinal Community Outreach program has reached new heights under Doyle's watch, earning the prestigious Thomas Ford Award in each of the past four years (2004-07). The award is given annually to the Stanford Athletics team that "demonstrates a special commitment to participation in the local community."

Prior to coming to The Farm, Doyle taught World History, U.S. Government and Journalism, while also coaching football and baseball at his alma mater St. Francis High School in nearby Mountain View. Doyle earned his Bachelors degree in History, with a minor in English, from UC Davis in 1998, where he played outfield on the baseball team.

He and his wife, Hillary, married in the summer of 2005, reside in nearby Menlo Park.

Mike Gleeson

Video Director

Mike Gleeson is in his 15th season as the video director for the Department of Athletics in 2006. A native of Napa Valley, Gleeson came to Stanford after 10 seasons in professional football, including two with the New Orleans Saints, four with the Miami Dolphins, two with the Atlanta Falcons and two in the World Football League.

In his current position, Gleeson oversees all of the audio, video and computer needs of the Football Department. His responsibilities include videotaping of all practices and games, and editing for the strategic preparation and planning by the football coaching staff.

In addition, Gleeson also edits weekly highlight videos for the football program as well as season recruiting videos for football, men's basketball and women's basketball. He has been named the Video Director of the Year in the Pacific-10 Conference five times during his Stanford career.

Gleeson, who graduated from California State University at Sacramento in 1989 with a Bachelors degree in Business Management, has a daughter Clare (born 3/8/92).

Jon Haskins

Administrative Associate

Former Cardinal Jon Haskins returns to The Farm for his first season as an Administrative Associate. Haskins has coached at Riverview High School in Florida and was a graduate assistant at Duke for three years (2002-04) after playing professionally for three seasons.

Haskins was a four-year starter for Stanford from 1994-97 at outside, middle and weakside linebacker after coming to The Farm as a USA Today prep All-American. He was a two-time Honorable Mention All-Pac-10 selection and was a part of two Cardinal bowl teams (1995 Sun Bowl, 1996 Liberty Bowl). Haskins, who had 250 tackles in his career, played in the Blue/Gray and Hula Bowl All-Star Games following his senior season. He was selected in the seventh round of the 1998 NFL Draft by the San Diego Chargers.

Haskins, who earned his Bachelors degree from Stanford in Public Policy in 2000, played professionally for three seasons (1998-2000), two in the NFL (San Diego and Philadelphia in 1998; San Diego in 1999) and one in the XFL. He received a Masters degree in Humanities from Duke in 2007. Haskins is single and resides in Palo Alto.

Coleman Hutzler

Recruiting Assistant

Coleman Hutzler is in his first season with the Cardinal football program as a recruiting assistant. He will work closely with recruiting coordinator Lance Anderson. Last season, Hutzler was a defensive assistant for head coach Jim Harbaugh at The University of San Diego. where he helped the USD defense rank among the best in the country in I-AA football.

Hutzler, a native of Las Vegas, Nevada, graduated from Middlebury College in Middlebury, Vermont, with a degree in Psychology. He played linebacker for the Panthers from 2002-05 and finished his career second on the all-time list in tackles with 246. He also accounted for 26 tackles-for-loss, 10 quarterback sacks, three interceptions and three forced fumbles while being named team captain.

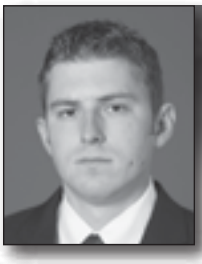

Hutzler attended The Meadows School in Las Vegas, where he graduated in 2002 after leading his team to its fifth consecutive AA State Championship and state record 41 consecutive victories.

Theresa Miraglia

Administrative Associate

Theresa Miraglia is in her 15th year at Stanford and sixth season with the Cardinal football program in 2007. In her current position, she is the administrative associate for the football program in addition to processing all football related expenses. Prior to joining the football program, Theresa worked in the Athletics Accounting Department for eight years. She has a son, Drew (born 9/7/94).

Mike Sanford
Offensive Assistant

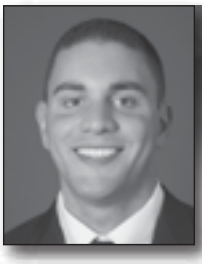

Mike Sanford, who played quarterback at Boise State from 2000-04, begins his first season for the Cardinal as an offensive assistant. Sanford was part of a Bronco program that went to four bowl games during his five years in Boise, compiling a record of 54-9. As a senior in '04, Sanford was part of a Boise State team that played Louisville in the Liberty Bowl and finished with an 11-1 record. After concluding his playing career for the Broncos, Sanford volunteered as a student assistant for Boise State during spring practice, where he assisted now head coach Chris Petersen with the quarterbacks.

For the past two years, Sanford was a graduate assistant at UNLV (2005-06) working with his dad, Mike, who is the Rebels' head coach and former offensive coordinator at Stanford. While with the Rebels, Sanford worked primarily with the quarterbacks and was the specialists coach working closely with many phases of the kicking game. Sanford received his Bachelors degree in Political Science from Boise State in 2005.

Chris Turner
Director of Player Personnel

Chris Turner has coached in the NFL with the Oakland Raiders and on the intercollegiate level at Notre Dame and Bucknell, and he begins his first season at Stanford as director of player personnel. Turner coached tight ends and was the assistant offensive line coach for the Raiders during his four year tenure (2002-05) in Oakland. He was part of the 2003 Raiders' team that played in the Super Bowl. Turner spent seven seasons at Bucknell (1995-2001) and one year at Notre Dame as a graduate assistant (1994). At Bucknell, he spent time coaching quarterbacks, running backs, tackles and tight ends. He was a football administrative assistant at San Jose State during the 1993 season. Turner is a 1993 graduate of Long Beach State.

Matt Weiss
Graduate Assistant

Former Vanderbilt punter Matt Weiss is in his third season at Stanford as a graduate assistant coach in 2007 working on the defensive side of the ball. He is responsible for all opponent offensive breakdowns, tendency reports, and scouting reports as well as the direction of the opponent offensive scout team during practice. Weiss also works closely with special teams coordinator D.J. Durkin in all aspects of Stanford's special teams. As part of this role, he serves as the position coach for the Stanford kickers, punters and long snappers.

Previously, Weiss assisted with the defensive backs in 2005, and worked with outside linebackers and special teams in 2006. Before coming to Stanford, Weiss graduated magna cum laude from Vanderbilt in the Fall of 2004, earning a Bachelor of Science degree in Economics and Human and Organizational Development. He will complete his Masters degree in liberal arts at Stanford this fall.

Weiss was a member of the Vanderbilt football team in both 2001 and 2002, and was named to the Southeastern Conference Football Academic Honor Roll in 2002. He then served as an assistant football coach at Smyrna High School in Tennessee during the fall of 2003 and 2004.

Originally from Cheshire, Connecticut, Weiss played quarterback at Hopkins School in New Haven, where he graduated in 2001 after leading his team to its first ever 12-0 record and New England Prep School Class C Championship.

Weiss is single and currently resides in Los Altos.

Stanford University is committed to the academic success of the student-athlete

Athletic Academic Resource Center

Located in the Arrillaga Center for Sports and Recreation, the Athletic Academic Resource Center (AARC) is a support center for Stanford varsity student-athletes. Equipped with a computer cluster, large study tables and comfortable seating, the AARC is a natural gathering place for student-athletes who come for academic advising, to study, to check e-mail or course assignments online, be tutored, or to relax between class time and practice.

The AARC is staffed by the Academic Director for Student-Athletes and the Assistant Academic Director for Student-Athletes. The two work as a team in advising student-athletes and coordinating the Partners for Academic Excellence (PAE) program.

The goal of the AARC is to help each Stanford student-athlete realize their full academic potential. The AARC provides the following services for student-athletes: Study Table, Tutoring, Computer Access, Advising/Counseling and Partners for Academic Excellence (PAE).

Study Table

During the academic year the AARC provides a study table open to all Stanford student-athletes. On hand at study table are experienced math, physics, chemistry, biology, economics and writing tutors ready to assist athletes with any of their academic needs.

Tutoring

The AARC staff coordinates a tutoring program which provides student-athletes with help for most classes in which they could use assistance. The tutors are graduates or upper-class students who are available to help Stanford student-athletes achieve their academic goals.

Computer Access

The AARC has 14 Macintosh G4's and one PC available during regular AARC hours. The AARC is also a "hot spot" where students with wireless capability on their laptops can access the internet. Twelve Macintosh laptop computers and one PC laptop computer are available for check-out by student-athletes on a first-come, first-served basis for use during road trips for Stanford competitions.

Advising/Counseling

The AARC staff provides student-athletes with both short and long-term academic counseling and serves as a back-up to the student-athlete's assigned advisor.

Short-term:

- Help student-athletes choose classes, and provide information on professors and the workload and level of difficulty of classes
- Aid student-athletes in scheduling classes around practice and game schedules
- Provide assistance should conflicts arise with exams and competition

Long-term:

- Help students choose majors that are consistent with their interests and goals, and help ensure that they fulfill their requirements and are on course to graduate in four years
- Offer guidance about graduate and professional school opportunities and career planning

PAE – Partners for Academic Excellence

Co-sponsored by Undergraduate Advising and Research (UAR) and the Athletic Department, PAE assists Stanford student-athletes in managing their demanding schedules and in utilizing their limited free time efficiently to ensure academic excellence. By grouping several student-athletes together from different sports based on a similar preliminary academic interest, the PAE program focuses on creating an academic community for specific first-year students. Each group has an undergraduate mentor and a graduate student mentor, which are likely to be current and former student-athletes. During the autumn quarter, PAE participants meet weekly as a study group to assist with the transition from high school to university study. In the winter, the groups more actively explore academic resources. Dinners with faculty members and Stanford alums who may share an academic or career interest are also part of the program. Freshmen have the opportunity, in a relaxed informal setting, to meet and talk with faculty who may otherwise be hard to approach. First-year student-athletes have the option of earning one unit of academic credit for participation in the PAE program by completing course requirements that encourage students to take advantage of the numerous academic resources that will be beneficial to their Stanford career.

Equipment Staff

Protection of the student athlete is the focal point of the Stanford Athletics equipment staff. Football players at Stanford are equipped with not only the finest in athletic gear but also benefit from the expertise of the Stanford Athletics equipment staff.

Gary Hazelitt is entering his eighth season as the head equipment manager at Stanford in 2007. He is responsible for overseeing the purchasing, fitting, maintenance, and distribution of equipment for the Stanford athletic program working primarily with the football team. He and his staff are in charge of coordinating the equipment and apparel needs for the football team's practices, games and travel.

He is also responsible for the overall budgeting of the athletic department equipment needs and oversees the allocation and disbursement of the department apparel contract. He is a certified member of the Athletic Equipment Manager's Association and prior coming to Stanford served as the head equipment manager at San Jose State (1990-99) and the assistant equipment manager at Cal State Fullerton (1983-89).

Hazelitt oversees a staff that includes long-time assistant equipment managers Ted Hanson, Matt Ritson and Ron Yamaguchi. Ray Alcantra, Jeremy Gillan, Jeff Quintana and Jon Segovia will serve as the football managers for the 2007 season.

Hazelitt resides in San Jose with his wife LuAnn and daughters Bethany and Abby.

The Strength Training Facility

Stanford student-athletes enjoy access to the most modern and up-to-date equipment and technology available in the field of Strength and Conditioning. Cardinal football players train in a 10,000 square foot state-of-the-art facility located in the Arrillaga Family Sports Center that is the strength and conditioning home to Stanford's 35 intercollegiate sports programs.

The weight room has been equipped with an impact absorbent sports surface. In addition, the plyometric exercise area is composed of an impact absorbent composite flooring system that measures well over an inch in thickness and is specially designed to reduce the impact imposed on the body during exercise.

Included in the new Varsity Weight Room are eight Powerlift Olympic platforms as well as 16 Powerlift self-contained weight lifting stations, approximately 12 tons of free weights, three complete sets of dumbbells from five to 150 pounds, a complete line of Hammer Strength and selectorized machines, state-of-the-art video equipment and a complete line of cardiovascular equipment (which includes treadmills, stair steppers, elliptical trainers, exercise bikes, and rowing ergometers).

The Varsity Weight Room also has a fully equipped nutrition and supplement station, complete with everything an athlete may need in the way of recovery and carbohydrate replacement beverages and dietary supplements.

The Strength Training Program

Under the guidance of Strength and Conditioning Coach Shannon Turley, the quality and breadth of the Stanford Strength & Conditioning Program ensures that Stanford football players are among the best athletes in the nation. The goal of the program is to develop student-athletes who consistently display a strong work ethic and who dedicate themselves to their preparation. This is accomplished by implementing a comprehensive program that teaches attention to detail, technique, effort, attitude, mental discipline, nutrition, teamwork, leadership and accountability.

Each student-athlete receives an individually designed program that seeks to improve functional athleticism as measured by evaluations of performance factors, including speed, power, strength, acceleration, deceleration, balance, coordination, mobility and body composition.

The Lacob Family Sports Medicine and Human Performance Center includes a full medical facility.

Stanford's training offerings include complete rehabilitation facilities.

Stanford Athletics has the finest sports specialists, physicians and trainers available through the Stanford Sports Medicine Program.

Stanford Sports Medicine

The Athletic Department, the Stanford University School of Medicine and Stanford Hospital and Clinics have together developed an integrated plan to provide comprehensive care to Stanford athletes. The goal of this program, now in its 15th year, is to ensure that student-athletes receive medical treatment and rehabilitation that is at the leading edge of sports medicine.

Stanford Sports Medicine facilities received a substantial upgrade recently, including the renovation of the main athletic training room and the addition of a new 10,000 square foot Lacob Family Sports Medicine and Human Performance Center. The Center, which opened in April of 2006, is a state-of-the-art facility offering comprehensive health services for sport and non-athletic injuries and illnesses. The Center has a medical clinic with six exam rooms, a treatment room, a private consulting office and diagnostic imaging with digital X-ray. The new facility also features a Rehabilitation Clinic with the latest equipment and hydrotherapy including a Human Performance Lab offering, biomechanical analyses, exercise physiology, fitness testing and cardiovascular assessment.

The Center provides many services including physician examinations, medications, casting/splinting, IV hydration, laboratory work and urgent care. In addition, Cardinal athletes have access to an outstanding rehabilitation program that includes physical therapy services such as injury evaluation, gait analysis, individualized rehabilitation, sports retraining and hydrotherapy.

Medical care for Stanford student-athletes extends beyond the playing field. The Sports Medicine Program treats all medical conditions while evaluating and maintaining the health of all student-athletes, in addition to optimizing their performance on the playing field. Cardinal athletes have access to 10 team physicians and 32 medical consultants. Experts in the field of orthopedic surgery, sports medicine, physical medicine and rehabilitation, rheumatology and internal medicine are available to all student-athletes at Stanford. The Sports Medicine Program provides over 1100 hours of physician's attendance at athletic events each year.

The physical therapist for Stanford Football and the Director of Athletic Training & Rehabilitation at Stanford is Moira Jamati. She oversees the athletic training and rehabilitation for the 35 sports and approximately 800 student-athletes at Stanford. Jamati, now in her sixth year at Stanford, has worked with professional, international and collegiate athletes, and is a licensed physical therapist and strength and conditioning specialist as well as a certified athletic trainer.

The Director of the Athletic Department's Sports Medicine Program is Gordon O. Matheson, MD., Ph.D., who is also a Professor in the Medical School. Dr. Matheson, a fellowship-trained sports medicine physician with a Ph.D. in exercise physiology, has served as physician to Olympic teams and the National Hockey League. He is editor of The Physician and Sports Medicine journal and a member of the Executive Committee for the undergraduate program in Human Biology.

The team physicians for football include Dr. Matheson, Dr. Gerry Keane, Dr. Jason Dragoo and Dr. Marc Safran. Dr. Safran is a professor in the Department of Orthopedics at the Stanford University School of Medicine, while Dr. Keane is a physical medicine and rehabilitation physician who specializes in the spine. Dr. Dragoo, an assistant professor in the Stanford University School of Medicine, is an orthopedist who completed his fellowship training at the Steadman-Hawkins Clinic.

Stanford has a very experienced full-time physical therapy and athletic training staff that includes Perry Archibald, Steve Bartlinski, Rob Dalnoki, Eitan Gelber, Melissa Hodgins, Tamara Johann, Charlie Miller, Christina Puno, Brad Sain, Marcella Shorty and Tomoo Yamada, as well as eight certified athletic training graduate assistants.
